

Finished nail art canes look a little like small sticks of rock. The design you can see at the end runs through the whole length of the cane.

The designs are created by splitting the desired finished pattern down into the component parts. Each of the components are then made by layering many colours of clay, then taking these and stacking them gradually building up the design. All of the finished components are finally stacked together - sometimes up to 300! - to create the finished unbaked cane which can be 20cm or more wide.

The cane is then carefully stretched and reduced in size to the required diameter. This is where the magic happens! As you reduce the cane in diameter the pattern inside also reduces, keeping its shape and detail. The cane is then baked to cure the clay and when the cane is sliced in cross-section, the detailed pattern inside is revealed.

Often once a design is complete it is wrapped in a translucent clay which appears white until it is baked. This layer helps maintain the designs shape whilst being reduced and becomes invisible when applied to the nail. To slice the finished, baked cane, use a single edged razor blade and carefully press down on the cane at the point you wish to cut. You may warm the canes in your hand prior to cutting to make the canes a little softer resulting in the cutting process being slightly easier.

- Our Fimo polymer nail art canes can be used with natural, acrylic and gel enhancements and can be embedded into nail polish and coloured gels.
- Best results are achieved by slicing the canes paper thin. Our products can be used to create 3D nail art effects and do not need to be sealed or covered.
- Our nail art slices retain their colour and design even after filing and do not react to any of the products used in nail enhancements.
- Our nail art canes can be stored for use without fear of the quality degrading. We recommend using the products within 5 years of purchase.
- We have provided a series of free tutorials to demonstrate the use of our products with both acrylics and gel based enhancements.

Visit our eBay shop today and find over 500 beautifully hand crafted nail art cane designs

